

Over 500 enjoy National Museum of American Jewish History Gala

Photos and Story by Bonnie Squires For Main Line Media News Updated 1 hr ago Comments

Joe Neubauer and his wife Annette Lerman Neubauer were delighted to honor their friend Ron Rubin. The National Museum of American Jewish History (NMAJH) honored prominent Philadelphia real-estate developer and philanthropist, Ron Rubin, at the Only in America Gala, held at the Hyatt at The Bellevue Dec. 13, 2016. One of the premier social and philanthropic events on the Philadelphia calendar, the Gala celebrated Rubin's commitment to the Museum and honored his lifetime of service to the Greater Philadelphia business, cultural, and philanthropic community.

NMAJH is the only Museum that presents a comprehensive history of Jews in America, how they immigrated to this country and how they succeeded, and that aims to inspire in people of all backgrounds a greater appreciation of the freedoms to which all Americans aspire.

Ivy Barsky, CEO, and Gwen Goodman director, announced that $1.3 million had been raised at the Gala, which featured world renowned tenor Andrea Bocelli performing at the dinner. More than 500 guests enjoyed the cocktail reception, dinner, remarks and concert.